

Internship Role: Writer

Your creative input and writing skills can be a valuable part of what makes KPOP-TV so much fun for our viewers! Our internship program gives you the chance to get real experience putting together scripts, promos, commercials, pop quiz segments, news stories and more!

You must possess the following qualities and capabilities:

- Team player who can give and receive constructive criticism
- Fluency in written and spoken English
- Adept in using computers, word processing programs, and collaborative online tools (such as Google Docs and Drive)
- The flexibility to change between several different writing contexts (news, VJ scripts, advertising, etc.)
- The ability to analyze an excerpt of writing and to identify the central concept as well as any tangential ideas
- A decent background of K-Pop knowledge (for example common terms and trends, the most popular groups, essential cultural concepts)
- Related major or academic credits preferred

This unpaid internship will require you to meet with the team at our San Francisco headquarters once a week on Saturdays (4-8 hours) to attend meetings, lessons, and work sessions. Additionally you will be expected to work independently on pieces 4-8 hours per week.

Our internships are 6 months long, during which you will work alongside our professional staff, learning and developing the best creative strategies for national broadcast television and global media. Your successful efforts will be broadcast on our network and will provide you many opportunities to add to your portfolio of published works.

If you are interested in getting valuable experience in the industry through our internship program, prepare a list of your education and experience (or résumé) as well as a cover letter to introduce yourself, then visit our application page.
